Once there was a little girl Lily, who was very friendly and popular in her class. She was friends with everyone in her class. There was no one in class who didn't 35 her.

She was very 36 and would always be busy with her friends. She felt very happy that she had so many friends at school.

On Friendship Day, their class organized an event, in which everyone had to prepare three 37 and give them to their best friends. Lily was very happy for the coming Friendship Day and was expecting gifts from her 38.

However, when all gifts were shared in class, she was the only one who didn't receive any gift! She felt 39 and cried a lot. She thought to herself how it was possible. She had made so much effort (努力) to be friends with everyone but in the end no one thought of her as one of their best friends.

Everyone came and tried to comfort (安慰) her but each one only stayed for a short time before 40. This was exactly what Lily had done so many times to others.

When she got home, seeing her sad face, her mother asked her why she looked so down. She questioned, "Where can I 41 true friends?"

Her mother was surprised at her question. Then Lily told her about the day in school. Her mother comforted her and said, "You cannot get real friends with a smile or a few good words. If you really want true friends, you will have to 42 them real time and love. For a true friend, you must always be there, in good times and bad. There just isn't enough 43 to be there for everyone, so it's only possible to have some true friends."

With tears in her eyes, Lily got to know what makes 44 friends. She nodded and made up her mind to do something different.

Many people love taking photographs. Some are good at taking pictures of people. Others focus more on sports or nature.

Mr. Luo, a retired railroad worker, took up photography at age 60. He joined a photography club and became an active member of it. He often went on bike rides and took pictures. This summer he did something unusual but amazing with his camera.

On that day, Mr. Luo got up at 5:00 a.m. He went to a pond in the countryside where there were always plenty of dragonflies. With great excitement, he set up his camera. First, he found a water bug in the muddy water. He waited until the bug climbed up a lily pad. There, it stopped to rest.

Fifteen minutes later, the bug's body began to change. The skin split behind the head, and the adult dragonfly crawled out of its old skin. One hour later, the dragonfly started to separate its wings, which had been wet and folded at the beginning. Then, the dragonfly opened its wings for the first time. In another hour, the dragonfly moved with its wings and flew off for food.

He took a series of pictures of a dragonfly that was changing from a nymph to an adult. Using his camera, he recorded (记录) the whole process, which took nearly five hours!

People are amazed at the series of pictures. Whenever people praise(夸赞) him for his work, Mr. Luo says, "Don't give the credit to me. Give it to nature. I just use my camera to record the moment and show it to the world."

48. What is Mr. Luo's hobby after he retired?

- A. Doing sports.
- B. Taking pictures.
- C. Recording videos.
- D. Going on bike rides.

49. What unusual and amazing thing did Mr. Luo do?

- A. He went to a pond in the countryside.
- B. He found a water bug in the muddy water.
- C. He explained why the countryside was so beautiful.
- D. He recorded how a water bug changed into a dragonfly.

50. When people praise Mr. Luo for his work, he _____.

- A. receives it very excitedly
- B. cares about it very much
- C. gives the credit to nature
- D. records the wonderful moment

51. What can we learn about Mr. Luo from his story?

- A. He makes a living by taking pictures.
- B. He can wait long to take good pictures.
- C. He took up photography at an early age.
- D. He has won a lot of prizes in photography.

Are you a little shy when it comes to raising your hand in class? If so, that's totally normal. We've been there. With all attention on you, it can be so scary to speak up.

However, if you can break through your fear, we promise you can benefit (受益) a lot. According to a government study, some students are falling behind because they're too shy to put their hands up when a teacher asks a question. So try to raise your hand!

To start with, you'll realize the power of being wrong. Nobody is right all the time. Your teacher will be happy to see your participation and won't punish you for being wrong. He or she will explain why you're wrong. You'll learn something new. Chances are, other students think the same thing as you, but don't speak up. Not only do you help yourself, but you help your shy classmates, too.

Besides, your teacher will know you're interested in learning. Participating in class shows that you are not falling asleep behind your textbook. This is beneficial to you and your teacher. Your teacher will appreciate your interaction (互动) during the lesson and will remember your enthusiasm (热情). The next time you're one point away from an A⁺.

What's more, you'll have fun discussing with your classmates. When you and other classmates are raising hands to answer questions, it makes the class more interesting and allows you to actively engage with the lesson. Your teacher doesn't have to stand in the front of the room talking nonstop for a long time. Class time will fly by and your mind won't be wandering to the clock every 5 minutes.

Most importantly, you'll know that you've actually learned the material. One of the best ways to prove that you actually know something is by talking about it. Speaking up in class shows that you are trying to understand or have understood what you've been taught.

Don't be shy or afraid to raise your hand in class. Nobody is judging you. Seriously. It'll finally pay off!

52. In Paragraph 2, the writer uses the government study to show _____.

- A. putting hands up is difficult
- B. being shy can benefit you
- C. raising hands is important
- D. asking questions is necessary

53. The underlined phrase "engage with" in Paragraph 5 probably means "_____".

- A. worry about
- B. take care of
- C. think about
- D. take part in

54. The writer probably agrees that _____.

- A. being active in class is helpful to your study
- B. teachers should help students learn more in class
- C. students like discussing better than answering questions
- D. speaking up in class means understanding the material well

55. What is the writer's main purpose in writing this passage?

- A. To encourage students to speak up in class.
- B. To question about the material learned in class.
- C. To discuss reasons why students are shy in class.
- D. To introduce ways to help students raise hands in class.

七、阅读短文，根据短文内容回答问题。(共10分，每小题2分)

A Chinese Class in Chicago High School

Standing in front of the blackboard, Christina Xu starts the class as usual, which lasts 90 minutes. Sixteen students stand up, shout their greetings of "good morning" in Chinese, and start the class.

This is a usual Chinese class at Walter Payton College Preparatory High School in downtown Chicago. The 16 students are divided (分成) into small groups, four in each group, to practice Chinese speaking and writing.

The four different tones (声调) are one of the most difficult parts in Chinese learning. To make it easier, Xu uses gestures, and asks the students to match gestures with the words she pronounces.

Walter Payton is one of the 41 public schools in Chicago that offer Chinese classes. About 60 certified full-time Chinese teachers like Xu are offering Chinese courses in four levels to about 11,000 elementary and middle school students in Chicago Public Schools (CPS).

“CPS offers 12 foreign languages for students to choose,” said Jane Lu, CPS Chinese world language coordinator and director of the Confucius Institute in Chicago. “In 2018, Chinese replaced French to become the second most chosen foreign language.” Lu thinks it is because of the rapid development and rising of China on the world’s stage.

Sixteen-year-old Steven Norinsky is a junior at Walter Payton. He has been learning Chinese since elementary school. He plans to learn it throughout high school. “I choose Chinese because I think it is the most important language to learn,” Norinsky explained.

56. What do the 16 students practice in small group?
57. Are the four different tones one of the most difficult parts in Chinese learning?
58. How many public schools offer Chinese classes in Chicago?
59. When did Chinese become the second most chosen foreign language in Chicago?
60. Why does Norinsky choose to learn Chinese?
